Published at: 05-02-2010

- The European Citizens have only rights, they must also have duties;
- Need to encourage the mobility of European citizens, more particularly to increase the financing for the European exchange programmes; we need follow-up of the programmes and more visibility of the programmes for the whole society; need to include young people who don't have the possibility to participate in exchange programmes; more mobility creates feeling of common identity;
- The EU programmes should provide social inclusion; they should consider the local needs; some projects are more successful if organized at a local level (the question is how to restructure the projects to make them reach the people at local level);
- To have a common identity, we need to have common values or to unify them which means a common political project (i.e. European Constitution); EU relies on homogeneity so that we could speak about common values, collective conscience;
- Education is essential; there is a need for more active policies directed to young people; the first step to construct the European identity is the cultural and intellectual attitude of every member state; the importance of European history should be highlighted in the education process;
- The EU should be solution of the problems of the globalization and not be accepted as a loss of identity; EU is not a symbol of the globalization, it doesn't deprive citizens of their national identity;
- The generation after 1989, despite its relative indifference, will contribute to the creation of a common identity through its common values;
- 2011 the European year of voluntary service the voluntary service encourages the active citizenship and promotes the European identity and it should be supported; it shouldn' t replace the state duties;
- The active policy for children is essential;
- More funds are needed for programmes for inclusion of the Roma minority, but within them there

	European Cultural Space and Identity: Vid recordings from the Europe 2020 - Civ Visions international conference should rather be included various cultures,	not only Roma people.

- The European Citizens have only rights, they must also have duties;
- Need to encourage the mobility of European citizens, more particularly to increase the financing for the European exchange programmes; we need follow-up of the programmes and more visibility of the programmes for the whole society; need to include young people who don't have the possibility to participate in exchange programmes; more mobility creates feeling of common identity;
- The EU programmes should provide social inclusion; they should consider the local needs; some projects are more successful if organized at a local level (the question is how to restructure the projects to make them reach the people at local level);
- To have a common identity, we need to have common values or to unify them which means a common political project (i.e. European Constitution); EU relies on homogeneity so that we could speak about common values, collective conscience;
- Education is essential; there is a need for more active policies directed to young people; the first step to construct the European identity is the cultural and intellectual attitude of every member state; the importance of European history should be highlighted in the education process;
- The EU should be solution of the problems of the globalization and not be accepted as a loss of identity; EU is not a symbol of the globalization, it doesn't deprive citizens of their national identity;
- The generation after 1989, despite its relative indifference, will contribute to the creation of a common identity through its common values;
- 2011 the European year of voluntary service the voluntary service encourages the active citizenship and promotes the European identity and it should be supported; it shouldn't replace the state duties;
- The active policy for children is essential;
- More funds are needed for programmes for inclusion of the Roma minority, but within them there should rather be included various cultures, not only Roma people.

- The European Citizens have only rights, they must also have duties;
- Need to encourage the mobility of European citizens, more particularly to increase the financing for the European exchange programmes; we need follow-up of the programmes and more visibility of the programmes for the whole society; need to include young people who don't have the possibility to participate in exchange programmes; more mobility creates feeling of common identity;
- The EU programmes should provide social inclusion; they should consider the local needs; some projects are more successful if organized at a local level (the question is how to restructure the projects to make them reach the people at local level);
- To have a common identity, we need to have common values or to unify them which means a common political project (i.e. European Constitution); EU relies on homogeneity so that we could speak about common values, collective conscience;
- Education is essential; there is a need for more active policies directed to young people; the first step to construct the European identity is the cultural and intellectual attitude of every member state; the importance of European history should be highlighted in the education process;
- The EU should be solution of the problems of the globalization and not be accepted as a loss of identity; EU is not a symbol of the globalization, it doesn't deprive citizens of their national identity;
- The generation after 1989, despite its relative indifference, will contribute to the creation of a common identity through its common values;
- 2011 the European year of voluntary service the voluntary service encourages the active citizenship and promotes the European identity and it should be supported; it shouldn't replace the state duties;
- The active policy for children is essential;
- More funds are needed for programmes for inclusion of the Roma minority, but within them there should rather be included various cultures, not only Roma people.

- The European Citizens have only rights, they must also have duties;
- Need to encourage the mobility of European citizens, more particularly to increase the financing for the European exchange programmes; we need follow-up of the programmes and more visibility of the programmes for the whole society; need to include young people who don't have the possibility to participate in exchange programmes; more mobility creates feeling of common identity;
- The EU programmes should provide social inclusion; they should consider the local needs; some projects are more successful if organized at a local level (the question is how to restructure the projects to make them reach the people at local level);
- To have a common identity, we need to have common values or to unify them which means a common political project (i.e. European Constitution); EU relies on homogeneity so that we could speak about common values, collective conscience;
- Education is essential; there is a need for more active policies directed to young people; the first step to construct the European identity is the cultural and intellectual attitude of every member state; the importance of European history should be highlighted in the education process;
- The EU should be solution of the problems of the globalization and not be accepted as a loss of identity; EU is not a symbol of the globalization, it doesn't deprive citizens of their national identity;
- The generation after 1989, despite its relative indifference, will contribute to the creation of a common identity through its common values;
- 2011 the European year of voluntary service the voluntary service encourages the active citizenship and promotes the European identity and it should be supported; it shouldn' t replace the state duties;
- The active policy for children is essential;
- More funds are needed for programmes for inclusion of the Roma minority, but within them there should rather be included various cultures, not only Roma people.

Index

Chapter 1 : Panel 2 - first part	p.	1
Chapter 2: Panel 2 - second part	p.	3
Chapter 3: Panel 2 - third part	p.	4
Chapter 4: Panel 2 - fourth part	p.	5
Contents	n.	6